

Caravan and holiday home exhibition returns to Glasgow

SCOTLAND'S largest caravan and holiday home event is returning for the first time in three years.

The Scottish Caravan, Motorhome & Holiday Home Show, sponsored by The Motorhome Store, is coming to Glasgow's SEC this weekend.

There is plenty on offer for happy campers to explore, including a range of caravans, motorhomes, campervans, holiday homes, lodges, tents, and accessories.

Isla Bissett from Caledonian Campers, who is exhibiting at the show, said: "We are excited to be back attending the 2023 Scottish Caravan, Motorhome and Holiday Home Show in person this year to showcase our award-winning, hand-crafted campervans and motorhomes and meeting the public face to face once more."

All the best travel advice is also available from industry experts and associations including the Caravan and Motorhome Club (CMC) and the Camping and Caravanning Club.

Visitors can enjoy free tuition in everything from towing to practice manoeuvring sessions from qualified CMC instructors at the event.

Calum Watson from BC Motorhomes said: "Throughout the pandemic, the industry experienced significant growth and even now, although European travel has re-opened, our sales haven't dropped."

The event's organisers QD Events also anticipate this year's event to be more popular than ever.

Greg Cherry, managing director of QD Events, said: "The upcoming event is set to be our most popular yet, with advance ticket sales hitting an all-time high since the very first show in 1987."

The Scottish Caravan, Motorhome & Holiday Home Show is at the SEC from tomorrow until Sunday.

Glasgow Times \(Online\)

31 January 2023

MUU: 2.8M

Scottish caravan exhibition comes to Glasgow after three year break

31st January

Caravan and holiday home exhibition comes to Glasgow after three year hiatus
(Image: SEC)

Scotland's largest caravan and holiday home event is returning for the first time in three years.

The Scottish Caravan, Motorhome & Holiday Home Show, sponsored by The Motorhome Store, is coming to Glasgow's SEC this weekend.

There is plenty on offer for happy campers to explore, including a range of caravans, motorhomes, campervans, holiday homes, lodges, tents, and accessories.

Isla Bissett from Caledonian Campers, who is exhibiting at the show, said: "We are excited to be back attending the 2023 Scottish Caravan, Motorhome and Holiday Home Show in person this year to showcase our award-winning, hand-crafted campervans and motorhomes and meeting the public face to face once more."

All the best travel advice is also available from industry experts and associations including the Caravan and Motorhome Club (CMC) and the Camping and Caravanning Club.

Visitors can enjoy free tuition in everything from towing to practice manoeuvring sessions from qualified CMC instructors at the event.

It is expected to be a busy turnout as staycations have increased in popularity since the last exhibition in February 2020, partly due to the pandemic putting foreign travel on hold.

Calum Watson from BC Motorhomes said: "Throughout the pandemic, the industry experienced significant growth and even now, although European travel has re-opened, our sales haven't dropped.

"Feedback from customers is that they are enjoying the lifestyle with no airport stress.

"We're expecting a lot of people to come and see us this weekend at the show. It's great to be back.

"We love meeting customers old and new and showing off our products."

The event's organisers QD Events also anticipate this year's event to be more popular than ever.

Greg Cherry, managing director of QD Events, said: "The upcoming event is set to be our most popular yet, with advance ticket sales hitting an all-time high since the very first show in 1987.

"The demand for touring holidays continues to grow, with more people looking to save money in 2023 and – whether travelling in the UK or further afield – avoid the hassle of airports and baggage restrictions.

"We can't wait to welcome our exhibitors, old and new, to the SEC this weekend to show off the latest trends in touring and hopefully inspire a new wave of holidaymakers to explore the great outdoors."

The Scottish Caravan, Motorhome & Holiday Home Show is at the SEC from Thursday, February 2 until Sunday, February 5.